As I sit down to write my last President’s Report I can’t help but think of the many adventures Bobbie and I have had in our Blue Birds. Like the time we left home in Texas with a single close destination in mind, and then continued on to one beautiful stop after another, eventually ending up in Savannah, GA. Remembering the many Rallies in the Valley where we arrived early at the Birds’ Nest and joined friends for pot luck dinners, card games, and lots of “chassis chat”. Then leaving Fort Valley in a convoy in order to assemble, along with several hundred other Blue Bird Motorhomes, in the staging area at the Georgia State Fairgrounds so that the parking committee could manage all of us. Those were the days! Dozens of vendors, catered dinners, incredible entertainment and friends gathered together for a week of fun and fellowship!

Then there were all the other rallies...rallies that invited us to join friends from coast to coast and border to border. We walked through the quaint streets of St. Augustine, FL, explored the majestic Rocky Mountains, traveled the winding roads of the Blue Ridge Parkway and everywhere we went, you made your home ours. Our hearts were touched by many local groups and we were entertained by talented folks in Branson, Sevierville, Nashville and many other wonderful stops along our Blue Bird journeys.

We have laughed together, and at times cried together, as tragedies touched our Family of Friends, but all in all we shared the best life had to offer. I hope you continue to join with your Blue Bird friends at rallies in the future. Whether large or small gatherings, the real fun begins when we get together.

Rallies are the heart of our club and I want to especially thank those members who have hosted a rally. For those officers and committee members who have given so much to make this club what it is today, I thank you. To Rich Ducci and his newsletter team, you are the best and your effort is greatly appreciated!

In October we will have our 2nd Annual Blue Bird Family Reunion. At the Annual General Membership Meeting new Board Members will be elected. They will carry on a great tradition of leading the Blue Bird Chapter of FMCA, so come and join in the fun.

Bobbie and I look forward to seeing you in Chattanooga in October. Thanks for joining us on the highways and byways of this great country. As always, until we see you “On the Road Again”, drive safely and enjoy America the Beautiful.

Dan
I hope that as you read this, the weather is better for you—cooler and that you can enjoy being outside again! It was a long, hot summer! Which means that the cooking I’ve done has been the easy, quick, top of the stove stuff—no ovens!

This is something I made the other night that was good; lots of veggies, fresh tasting, and literally about a 15 minute dinner. I’ve made this with various vegetables, adding thinly sliced carrots, yellow squash, and even some fresh spinach. Use your favorites, use what’s in the vegetable drawer in the fridge….

Veggie Pasta

Cook penne pasta per package directions. As the pot begins to boil, slice fresh zucchini, and cut some fresh tomatoes and cut several basil leaves. About 3 minutes before the pasta is done, drop the sliced zucchini into the pot. When done, drain the pasta and zucchini, return it to the pot, add the fresh tomatoes and the basil. Add parmesan cheese, freshly ground black pepper, mix, and put into a serving bowl. Pass extra cheese when you serve.

A green salad is all you really need with this.

I discovered that this can be a two-meal bonus dish. The next day, I sprinkled a bit of zesty Italian dressing on the (small amount of) leftovers, tossed it, and served it as a side salad. My lunch guests liked it as a salad.

On those still hot days in September, a different way to do tuna might be just the right lunch or simple supper.

Salmon Croquettes

| 2 cans salmon | 1 egg | ½ cup |

Mix, shape, and cook until brown on both sides by frying or baking. If you choose to bake them (and avoid the extra oil) rub each with a bit of oil and turn them over half-way through so they can brown well.

I hope you’re preparing for some fun trips this fall. As you plan for your trips, what are the “must-haves” you load into the coach kitchen? What are your stand-by dishes for the evenings after traveling? Do you make something for the evening get-togethers that you get requests for?

My two year term as cooking writer for the Newsletter will be ending soon. I know there are lots of good cooks out there and some good writers. Please think about volunteering, and/or nominating someone who can put a new slant to the column. Whoever it is, please do consider sending your recipes to Cooking@BluebirdChapter.org to help him/her get started and so that we can all share in your “bests”.

NEW WAY TUNA SALAD

Can of tuna, drained
capers, drained
finely chopped cucumbers
white beans, drained
Dressing: Mix equal parts of lemon juice and olive oil and add chopped parsley
Serve over mixed greens; or for a more filling dinner serve over pasta (I like bow tie pasta).

My mother used to make Salmon Cakes for us sometimes, and I liked hers a lot. However, I think this new-fashioned take on an old favorite is a good recipe to add a little bread or cracker crumbs a few spoonfuls of plain Greek style yogurt chopped parsley onion powder garlic powder Kosher salt pepper to taste

Mix, shape, and cook until brown on both sides by frying or baking. If you choose to bake them (and avoid the extra oil) rub each with a bit of oil and turn them over half-way through so they can brown well.
Mark Ballard Returns! - Chattanooga Rally!

“It’s been TOO long since I’ve seen all my Bluebird friends!” exclaims Mark Ballard. If you ever attended the Rally in the Valley in the late 1990’s and early 2000’s, you’ll remember being entertained by Macon, Georgia native Mark Ballard. He and his wife Debra held seminars and Mark spoke at various events for years during our gatherings in Perry, Georgia in the fall of each year.

Mark is a true Southern gentleman who also happens to be a television personality, humorist, author, designer and artist. During the Ladies’ Luncheon on Thursday of the Chattanooga event, Mark will combine innovative decorating and entertaining ideas with his renowned sense of humor for an unforgettable event. This modern day Renaissance man will demonstrate projects and recipes in an interactive, fun-filled program.

Mark will have his cookbooks, collectible porcelain plates, prints and seasonal merchandise for your shopping pleasure. And, he’ll be on-hand after the performance to visit with you, give you a taste of recipes prepared on stage and autograph your purchases.

Your artistic muscles will be stretched! You’ll leave entertained and refreshed! And you’ll be motivated to “go out and create something beautiful” in your life and the lives of your family and friends! Don’t miss this opportunity to catch up with Mark and what’s been going on in his and his family’s lives! See you there!

The "Riv-Nut" give machine screws a perfect mate to tighten things and not work lose because one can now use a lock washer or even perhaps a single drop of "blue" Loctite on the threads in some areas. If or when, the threads become worn or loose, one simply drills the old Riv-Nut out and replaces it with a new one, without making a larger hole in the Coach. These also seal tighter so no water or rain can leak to the interior and wreaking havoc with those panels. In the photos you can see where an old Riv-nut has been removed and a new one installed with an inexpensive tool I found on the web. There are many styles and such of this tool that sets the Riv-nut in place but unless you’re doing fasteners for a living, most of those others do not, in my mind, warrant the cost for the tools. The one that is shown in the photo, is $34.00 for a kit, works great for my needs and is small enough to store in a large empty pill bottle for safe keeping. The photos are from the front panels of my FC around the radiator grill area. Aid as soon as the weather cools, I will be taking down the main awning, getting rid of those sheet metal screws and installing Riv-nuts in their stead, thus not only sealing the top edge of the awning rail but sealing, fully, the screw entry holes completely that are along the roof line.

The second tip is more for the older Birds. Ever find yourself in battle with the old nemesis, sewer hose? You know the one, it is usually placed into a black plastic trash bag only to find that storage or finding and out of the way place is next to impossible? My answer to this was a 6 inch diameter, 6 foot cut down section of leach field drain pipe with a cap on one end. This was mounted with the holes facing down, under the back of my Coach and then a spring retainer across the open mouth of the sewer hose drain holder to keep the sewer hose in place for storage. Now there is no more fight to get the wily snaking hose into the plastic bag, which any extra water will remain for some time and usually is there to contend

The third and final tip for this month and perhaps one of the most important, since it is a concern to all Owner's of all model years. The LP systems on these wonderful machines are well designed and usually not in our thoughts, that is until it come times to fill them up, and we thought diesel fuel was high! Wow. <smile> All of these systems have a high pressure regulator that is the first thing the LP passes through then to a lower pressure regulator or secondary regulator to take the high pressure to a lower useable pressure of 11 inches of mercury on the U tube test tool. Recently I found that I did have a leak because the ethel mercaptan (rotten egg smell additive) would tell me that I need to do some further checking, that and the higher than normal LP use or lack of use but still showing the level dropping. There is a rubber hose (see the photo) that is connected from the first high pressure regulator to the hard piping that goes through out the Coach to deliver LP to separate systems, like the heaters, refrigerator, LP stove and ovens and in some Coaches the Primus heating system.

This single rubber hose, over time, will crack due to age and allow LP to escape, and it will be imperceptible most times and a hard one to find. I actually found mine with an electronic "sniffer" tool that is in my mixed bag of tricks from the days of my making house calls and working on these fantastic machines.

The later Birds, '88 up, the LP ASME tanks are hidden behind panels in the bays but still accessible and this hose does need to be checked if you start smelling that rotten egg smell. A new hose, with a protection outer sheath cost me $17.00 to have made at a local oil field hose shop.

Well, it has been 2 years now, of working with Rich Ducci, Neat Scott, Karen James, Kay Losh and everyone on the News Letter Staff. I want to thank each of you, for the opportunity and privilege of having fun being a part of a special Family. It has been a humbling experience and a rewarding one to have corresponded with each of you. And while most of you I have not met in person, Charolette and I certainly hope that one day we will. Kay Losh, of course, is part of our circle of Family and we will be seeing her and Joe at Blue River this Fall in trout fishing Camp. To Dan and Bobbi, you kids have done well in your tenure and thank you both. To Rich Ducci, whew, what can one say about working with you, it has been interstellar to say the least. And for all of us to have received international acclaim with our News Letter, well, it just don't get any better than this!

Thank to one and all, the signature "Safe Travels" that I have is truly from our heart to your homes. I have enjoyed the camaraderie, laughs and antics and with that said, I bid one and all a goodbye for now and will see you out on the "Road Again" and be sure to wave at Ruff Diamond (our Coach) as we pass on the high ways and byways across this magnificent Country.

Safe travels,

In September of 2009 I agreed to take over as the Bird Tracks Newsletter Chairman and the lofty goal of turning our publication into a monthly newsletter. Our first issue “rolled off the presses” to coincide with the Family of Friends Rally in Pigeon Forge Tennessee in the first part of October 2009. Now, here we are, about to embark upon a Family Reunion in Tennessee in October of 2011. Wow, looking back it is hard to believe the two years has gone by so quickly. Due to the hard work of a wonderful Newsletter Team, Bird Tracks has indeed been published every month throughout the two year term, this being our 24th issue. I am proud to say that this team has more than lived up to expectations, producing an Award Winning publication and I would be remiss to allow this opportunity to pass without offering sincere thanks to the team that made it possible.

Reoccurring monthly columns don’t just happen. They are the result of the ongoing, unfailing conscientiousness and work effort of those writing the columns, doing the designs, telling the stories and providing information about and for our Chapter. Entertaining stories don’t just appear. Chapter and Rally information doesn’t exist unless someone puts it all down. All of these things must be combined into a publication worthy of Blue Bird owners and I believe we accomplished that goal and did it in a timely manner as a monthly publication.

Kay Losh has really stepped up with her commitment to a wonderful selection of delicious recipes put forth each and every month. The column has taken us up a notch both in the quality it added to the newsletter and the one on my belt! I must add that I am not so happy about the 5 pounds gained by trying many of them out! Seriously, Kay, Thank you from all of us.

Ralph Fullenwider with his monthly column has taken Tech Advice to a higher level. Ralph, Your writing has both brought us a wealth of knowledge regarding our coaches and entertained us with your sense of humor. I knew when I asked you to come on board that you would be a tremendous asset to Bird Tracks. A big Thank you to you too.

Neat Scott has provided custom artwork and designs for the covers and column heads in every issue since our start. Neat designs have enhanced Bird Tracks visual appeal and brought the publication to the high level that was necessary to win the coveted FMCA Newsletter Award. Neat, Thank you for that and for the great stories you have contributed!

Shane Fedeli came on board with a desire to help all Bird owners looking to sell or trade their Bird for a newer model. His careful compilation of classified ads with links for email and phone contact along with the photos of each coach has helped many Bird owners. Thanks Shane.

Martha Vaughn has entertained us with her wit and ability for storytelling. Her contributions have made Bird Tracks much more diverse and fun! Articles that keep us laughing and looking forward to another story by Martha have been a welcome addition. Thank you, Martha.

Karen James has been an ongoing contributor of stories and articles as well. She has provided rally write-ups and contributed behind the scenes as well. Karen has made your newsletter better than it would have been. Karen, we thank you!

Slim Somerville has taught us with his detailed “how-to-care-for” articles and Bird Tracks Thanks You!!!!!!!  By Rich Ducci, Chairman—Editor

Brought first hand reporting of the Wanderlodge Factory closing and sale. Thanks, Slim for the knowledge gained from your informative articles as well as your work behind the scenes to help make this all happen.

Alan Ritchie, speaking of “behind the scenes”, has offered help in many aspects of producing an entertaining and informative newsletter. Thanks Alan!

In addition to serving on the Newsletter Committee, Karen James and Alan Ritchie did double duty as officers of the Chapter and Neat Scott served on the Welcoming Committee.

Brenda Rodgers! What can I say that is fitting of your continued support of Blue Bird folks? You have, even after retirement from Blue Bird, remained committed to the owners you met and became friends with over the years and we are sure glad you did. Your Sunshine & Mists column for the Newsletter keeps us informed on the welfare of fellow Blue Bird Family members. Thank you.

While thanking those that contributed so much to Bird Tracks over the last two years, I would be negligent not to thank our “Commander-in-Chief”, Dan Jensen. Thanks Dan for taking time each and every month to put down your thoughts for your monthly “Presidents Report” column. Your efforts here, in addition to your many other responsibilities, have kept the membership better informed and “in the loop” during the difficult change over from a factory sponsored Chapter to the great stand alone Chapter you worked so hard to create.

Thanks are also due Bruce Morris, who posted every issue of the Newsletter on the Wanderlodge Owners Online website so our emails could be sent with a link directly to Bird Tracks. Randy Dupree and his webmaster John Finn who upload the current issue and maintain an archive of many past issues on the Wanderlodge Owners Group website deserve a big thank you as well. The issues shown on these pages, with their generous help, can still be viewed on the WOG website. Shane Fedeli, as the Vintage Birds Webmaster has uploaded our current issues to the Vintage Birds website and deserves thanks too! These gentlemen, in addition to helping get the Bird Tracks news out, have contributed to bringing all Blue Bird owners closer together which, since the demise of the factory, is more important than ever before. Your efforts are sincerely appreciated. Thank you.

Thanks also go to the members who have sent in a Blue Bird, travel story or photograph. Your contributions are appreciated! The newsletter team along with help from the membership produces a first class newsletter and it is fitting that FMCA choose Bird Tracks to win First Place in the “Large Chapter”, non-factory sponsored division which has the toughest competition and thereby proclaiming it the best newsletter in the FMCA. It has been a pleasure working with you and it is now time to pass the baton to the next person. I wish you all the best and will continue to support the Chapter and Bird Tracks in the future.

Best Regards,
Rich Ducci
Stoning With Santa in Petoskey:  By Martha Rowe Vaughn

“We’re going to Petoskey, Michigan for a rally,” I informed my daughter Sallie.

“Bring me a Petoskey stone, please.”

“What is a Petoskey stone?” I questioned.

“I’m not sure. My friend from Michigan said you could find them in any tourist shop.”

“All right. I’ll bring you one. I just wish I knew what they are.”

In a few days I had the answer. We were in Traverse City, Michigan and decided to visit Sleeping Bear Dunes Park. I purchased a book on Petoskey stones in the gift shop. I read about their being formed from a hexagonally shaped coral that lived 100 million years before the dinosaurs. That was back when Michigan was located close to the equator and covered by a shallow sea. Many million years later, glaciers scraped across Michigan and uncovered the now petrified coral and deposited it mainly in the Traverse Bay area where Petoskey is located. The book said they could be found on the beaches, in road cuts, and at gravel pits. Polished ones could be purchased in shops in the area. They are mostly a light grey although some are nearly black. Oil permeated the coral beds and stained the darker ones.

So this is one request that would be easy to fulfill. I just needed a tourist shop. Some how we never managed to stop at one in the Traverse City area. On we went to Petoskey and the beautiful Hearthside Grove Luxury Motor Home Resort. Our guide took us all the way across the park to the next to the last site in a newly built area. Going past our site was a road that turned a curve and disappeared. The first evening I decided to see where the road went. I walked up it and passed the dumpster and recycle bins and the machine parking area. The road turned to dirt and went on around a curve. I never could resist a dirt road—comes from all the trail riding on horseback I’ve done over many years. So on I went.

Here I am alone on a dirt road and nobody knows where I am. I did have my cell phone—a rarity for me. The road opened up to a wide area with tall piles of dirt, topsoil, rocks, and gravel. I heard a motor running and from around a huge pile of dirt came a half naked man on a green ATV pulling a small trailer with two dogs running beside him. The man’s white hair and beard blew in the breeze. Before I could react he was right beside me and the dogs were jumping all over me.

“Are these your dogs? They followed me and I thought maybe they belonged in the RV park.”

“No they’re not mine. Down!” I ordered the smaller black dog when it jumped on me.

I felt no fear unlike the encounter with the stranger in the California Redwood Forest. The man was sun-browned. His wide flat face was a mass of wrinkles surrounding his sparkling blue eyes. He had an elfin air about him. He wore tan shorts and tennis shoes. His white beard reached the middle of his chest. He swiped his wispy white hair off his forehead.

“They got tags on them, but I don’t have my glasses and can’t see anything.” The concern for the exuberant dogs echoed in his voice. “I live on the road that borders here. I’ve not seen them before.”

It was then I remembered the cell phone in my pocket. “You hold one still and I’ll read the numbers and call.” I pulled out my phone and showed it to him.

He got off the ATV and held onto the retriever’s collar while I read off the numbers and keyed them into the phone.

“Hello?” A man answered.

“Do you have a small black dog and a golden retriever? They are near Hearthside Resort, running loose.”

“Where?”

“Just a minute. I’ll let a local talk to you.” I handed the phone to the man. In a few words he had relayed the information and agreed to meet the owner at the edge of the road.

He handed me back the phone and took off with the dogs running beside him. I walked further down the road wondering what kind of place I had found. Passing a fleet of digging machines, I realized it was a gravel pit and stone quarry. Gravel pit! Didn’t I just read about finding Petoskey stones in gravel pits? I stirred a pile of pebbles and there was one!

About that time the man came back. “Look,” I said, “I found a Petoskey stone!”

“Oh, that’s just a little bitty thing. Come on over here and I’ll find you some real good ones.”

I followed him over to a tall pile of stones as big as melons and down to fist size. “Hey, My name’s John.” He whipped out his driver’s license. “I’m known as the Petoskey Santa.” There was his picture out his driver’s license. “I’m a stone mason. You’ve stumbled on a rarity for me. The road opened up to a wide area with tall piles of dirt, topsoil, rocks, and gravel. You don’t find them very often!”

“Here’s one and look! This is a horn coral. Come on over here and I’ll find you some real good ones.”

He picked up a few stones. “Here’s one and look! This is a horn coral. You don’t find them very often!”

I joined in the hunt with this enthusiastic Santa. Before long we had a bunch of stones. I took them to a puddle and washed them.

John climbed all over the pile and would throw down prospects for me. “This (Continued on page 11) one looks like a shark’s tooth.”

We discussed the formation of the stones while we searched. He seemed surprised that I know as much as I do about geology.

“I wish I had brought the car. I’ve got more stones than I can possibly carry. Wow! Look at this one.” I picked up a large, tan stone covered with tubes of limestone.

“Oh! That’s a beauty! I’ve never found one like that. It is not a Petoskey stone, but a wonderful fossil. I’ve got my pressure washer at home. I’ll clean it up for you. Why don’t you put the stones in the trailer and I’ll take you back to the park.”

“OK.” We loaded the stones in the trailer.

John got on the ATV and stood up on the pedals. “You slip in behind me.”

I did and immediately wondered what was I going to hang onto. I liked the Santa, but not enough to grab him around his bare middle! Then I saw the handles on the fenders and grabbed on just as John took off. We whipped down the dirt road.

“What’s your husband going to think when you come home with Santa and a bunch of rocks?” He sounded a little worried.

“I’m going to get the owner. She will want to see this!”

A tall woman entered the room behind the clerk. Her eyes lit up when she saw the fossil. “Oh, my goodness,” she said as she caressed the fossil. “In 23 years of collecting stones, I have never found anything like this! It’s incredible and very rare. I think its museum quality! How many years have you been rock hunting?”

“Forty-five minutes.” My knees felt weak.

“So rare that it’s possible that you have just paid for your trip up here.”

I doubted that with the Giga-Rex at seven to eight miles to the gallon and diesel at $4.00 per gallon.

“Where did you find it?” The clerk asked.

“I’m sorry. I promised the guy who showed me the place that I would not tell.”

“This is what you should do. Take the fossil to Traverse City to the gem shop. The guy there will know what it is. If he offers you two to three hundred dollars for it, don’t take it. Get another opinion. It might be priceless.”

“All right. I will.” I was still skeptical. Doorstop or treasure?

“We invited them to sit and talk. I served wine and tea. It was a delightful time until the mosquitoes got too bad. We gave them a quart of the sourwood honey we bring with us as gifts for friends. Then they were gone: Santa and his lovely wife disappeared around the bend of the road.

But that is not the end of the story. I wanted to know what kind of fossil I had found. The next day I took it to a shop advertising Petoskey stones for sale. The clerk took one look at it and in an excited voice he said, comings down the road and he came out to greet us. I introduced him to John.

“I’ve got Petoskey stones!!” I handed one to Charlie. I explained that the road went to a gravel quarry and was full of the stones and how I met John and about the dogs while I unloaded my haul.

“I’ll go pressure wash this one,” John pointed to the fossil. “I’ll bring it back to you, probably tonight.”

“No rush.” I said. “Thanks for your help.” I waved as John motored up the road.

An hour later Charlie and I heard the ATV coming down the road. Santa was back. This time dressed in a snappy red shirt adding to his elfin looks. Behind him was a lovely woman with blonde hair. I went out the door to greet them while they dismounted.

“Hi, I’m Maude,” the woman extended her hand to me. Charlie came out the door and I introduced him.

We talked about the rocks. John showed me the fossil he had washed. It was really remarkable. With the dirt gone from it, each calcified tube stood out.

“It will make a great doorstop.” Maude commented.

“Don’t you want it? I’d be glad for you to have it.” I offered.

“Oh no, you keep it. You found it so it’s yours.” John said.

We invited them to sit and talk. I served wine and tea. It was a delightful time until the mosquitoes got too bad. We gave them a quart of the sourwood honey we bring with us as gifts for friends. Then they were gone: Santa and his lovely wife disappeared around the bend of the road.

But that is not the end of the story.

Amish Country Rally! By Susan Crocker

WOW!!! Did I say WOW!!!!? I meant double WOW! That is the only way to express what a great rally we experienced in Arthur, IL. Alvie and Elsie Miller, who had never attended a Blue Bird Rally, let alone hosted one, did a phenomenal job planning and hosting this one! It was like taking a “behind-the-scenes” tour at a popular tourist attraction.

The rally began Tuesday evening with a typical Amish church dinner prepared by the hosts. It is traditionally a simple meal of pickles, egg salad, freshly baked bread, jellies & preserves, and...Amish peanut butter, which is a homemade recipe consisting of peanut butter, marshmallow creme, a bit of butter, and Karo syrup. It was good an everything including your finger! Our dinner also included some of Alvie’s specially made Venison bologna. Elsie provided hand-stitched goodie bags, each with a different quilt square on the front, which contained a variety of Amish jams, jellies, noodles, freshly baked bread, the venison bologna, AND Amish peanut butter, as well as information on local points of interest. Following dinner, the group socialized and had the opportunity to ask questions about the Amish traditions. Because of Alvie’s and Elsie’s early Amish backgrounds, this lovely Mennonite couple were able to enlighten the group regarding the lifestyle of the Amish. They spoke very freely about their experience and were able to answer all questions asked.

Wednesday started with Elsie’s homemade cinnamon rolls, fruit, and coffee. What a way to start a day!!!! The rest of the day was filled with a horse drawn wagon tour of an Amish orchard and produce market, a tour of an Amish owned and operated canvas company, shopping at an amazing quilt shop, and a guided tour of a garage door manufacturing company (CHI), with lunch at Yoder’s Restaurant in Arthur sandwiched in between.

Thursday was a free day to visit some of the local points of interest. Some of the group took advantage of the opportunity to visit The Cross at the Crossroads (a 198-foot steel cross beside I-57 and I-70), My Garage Corvette Museum at Mid-America Motorworks, and a beautiful Catholic church in Teutopolis. The evening was an event in itself with a concert by a local musical group called Mackville followed by a potluck dinner. Our hosts provided huge pork/ham steaks and chicken grilled on site, while we provided side dishes. Again, the fellowship after the meal was a wonderful event. Friday was another busy day that began with brunch at Goldie’s Front Porch, a charming place where an authentic old front porch was reconstructed inside the building, situated along an interior wall with comfortable porch furnishings. After a meal of cinnamon rolls, sticky pecan rolls, blueberry-cream cheese stuffed baked French toast, and an egg, ham, cheese, and hashbrown casserole, we packed ourselves back into our cars and headed out to tour an Amish cabinet making company. The owner of Das Holz Haus also raises white-tailed deer to sell to hunting preserves. The rest of the day was spent riding through the countryside seeing a church bench wagon, a telephone house, watching cheese being made, and shopping in various shops in downtown Arthur. The day ended with a delicious evening meal in an Amish home followed by buggy rides for all.

Saturday, following a breakfast of donuts from Yoder’s restaurant, fruit, toast, and coffee, we sadly said good-bye (weighing about ten pounds more than when the rally began). I believe all of the rally participants would say that the hand-made goodie bags, the authentic Amish meals, the buggy rides, the tours of Amish businesses, as well as the CHI Garage Door tour, and the homemade breads and other food items, made this rally special. I think we would all agree that the exceptional hosts and the special bonding of the group made this rally one to be remembered for a very long time. It was fun to renew old friendships, as well as, make new ones. Hats off to Alvie and Elsie Miller for a job well done!!!!

Petoskey Rally at Hearthside Grove!

By Martha Rowe Vaughn

Jack and Ila Vandenberg hosted a magnificent rally in Petoskey, Michigan at the gorgeous Hearthside Grove Motorcoach Resort. The owners of fifteen coaches met on Wednesday, August 10, to sign in and enjoy a cocktail party at the clubhouse.

Thursday morning, the staff at Hearthside took us on a tour of the Arts and Crafts style bungalows located on the individual RV sites. We also enjoyed coffee and pastries at a newly constructed outdoor kitchen on another site. Hearthside Grove is a unique and beautifully landscaped park with huge lots and water features. It is owned by the Rose family who lives on site.

Thursday afternoon many of us went on a boat cruise on the Pointer in Harbor Springs. Captain Jim provided a colorful history of the harbor and its residents as we cruised through the deepest harbor in the Great Lakes.

Thursday night was a rousing time at Boyne Highlands. We ate dinner and enjoyed the show by the Young Americans, a group of energetic performers who sang, danced, played musical instruments, and served us dinner.

Friday afternoon, several daring Blue Birders donned harnesses and helmets and jumped into space on a 1,330 feet-long double zip line at Boyne Highlands. Gardner Wright and Dan Jensen went upside down on their second ride! After the Friday excitement we had an impromptu pizza party hosted by Jack and Ila.

Saturday we had a full breakfast provided by Hearthside Grove served in the clubhouse. We cancelled our plans to go to Mackinac Island because of the rain and decided to go to an antique boat show in Hessel, MI. It rained all day, but we still had fun looking at the old wooden boats and the local crafts.

Sunday, with a clear sky promising a gorgeous day, we ferried to Mackinac Island to see the sights and shop. For lunch we ate at the Grand Hotel at their huge buffet. We got back in time to catch a shuttle to the Odawa Casino for free gambling and another huge buffet. It was a 20-pound rally!

In between the scheduled events we had time to explore the area. There was Charlevoix Castle to tour, the Tunnel of Trees to drive, Petoskey stones to find, a lavender farm to see, sand dunes to climb, and fudge and ice cream to eat.

Monday we met at the clubhouse to eat a Continental breakfast and say our goodbyes. Susan Cocker surprised us with a great video of the rally available to the attendees. We had a terrific time! Thank you Jack and Ila for a wonderful rally in a beautiful area! Thank you to all the participants for coming!

Stoning With Santa in Petoskey: Continued By Martha Rowe Vaughn

arms and took it out to the car for me.

“Thank you. I’ll let you know what I find out.”

“Please do!” The clerk waved.

Two days later Charlie and I were headed to Traverse City to the gem store. Different thoughts whirled in my head. Was the fossil really valuable? What would I do if it were? If so, the fossil belonged where many people could view and study it, not just an object on a shelf in my home. I had done some research on line and discovered that it was from the Devonian period—350 million years ago! Then the reasonable side of me kicked in—nothing acquired so easily could have much value. In spite of the excitement of the store owner and clerk, I doubted the fossil was valuable enough to pay for one tank of gas for the car much less a tank of diesel for the GigaRex. Back and forth went my thoughts. Part of me wanted it to be valuable, the other part doubted it.

We entered the gem store and placed the fossil on the counter and waited for the owner to satisfy another customer and come to us. He picked up the fossil and examined it with a magnifying glass.

“It’s a pipe organ coral like this one.” He showed us a sample that really did not look much like mine. My fossil had about one hundred pencil-sized, segmented tubes side by side. His had less than a dozen in a random fashion. “It’s worth about 120 dollars retail. I’ll buy it for forty dollars or exchange it for eighty dollars of merchandise from my store.”

“I see. Let me think about it.” Something about his demeanor bothered me—too casual, too nonchalant. The shop owner disappeared through a door. I browsed around the store for something that might interest me. There were earrings, rings, necklaces, and bracelets. Charlie took a seat and waited.

“What would you do?” I asked him after not finding anything that struck my fancy.

“There’s no point in exchanging it for a piece of jewelry that you will put in a box and never wear. Think about it. How many people can say they have a 350 million year old object? You will get more satisfaction from telling the story about getting it than owning any piece of jewelry you would swap it for.”

The next day the clerk at Bailey’s called me. “One of my clients, a serious collector, will pay three hundred dollars for the fossil, sight unseen.”

I thought about it. The money meant very little to me. I decided to keep it.

Doorstop or treasure? It’s a treasure to me. Thank you, Santa!
